At first I thought it was some sort of gull, but because of its raucousness and the lack of structure in its flight pattern, it obviously wasn't. I've been looking for it, but it's mostly been too rainy to spend any time. He was flying back and forth, up and down the shore and when he'd get there he'd call and then start over again. Pretty common bird that I'm sure anyone who enjoys birds like. I wondered at first if he was injured. He called a bit, then flew off. There were at least 4 gulls out there that morning, so that must be what it was, but I'd think a shorebird would be too smart to fly around calling like that, so that's what's puzzling me. When we see a lot of shore birds on the beach, we call them the beachbirds. I'm not sure I know why, but that's how we call them. To me, a few of the shorebirds are in the common/wader/thick headed category, like the black skimmer and the rosy turnstone. A few are more in the flock/wader category, like the curlew sandpiper, the dickcissel, and the plover. Most are more in the wader/shorebird category, like the Eurasian whimbrel, the western curlew, the ruff, etc. I have to say, it sounds like that bird was probably a ruff. They're white with brown back and wings. They have the same raucous calling that the dowitcher does, and ruff are very common on the coast.Eiken Eiken is a former municipality in Sør-Trøndelag county, Norway.
